Features: The share price of Peugeot has fallen by 42.2% in the past six months and the company has announced that, despite having made a positive contribution to its balance sheet, the carmaker will have to seek to raise capital in the coming months. Peugeot made a pre-tax profit of €141.5m (£131.8m) in the second quarter of the year but its shares have fallen by 42.2% over the past six months, compared to a 17.2% fall for the CAC 40 over the same time. In recent weeks the carmaker has been holding talks with several banks to raise fresh capital, including being assessed by four banks including BNP Paribas and Credit Agricole. The company has also been approached by sovereign wealth funds. While some investors have questioned why Peugeot, a carmaker with a workforce of 28,000, has not yet been successful in finding a bank to invest in the business, the company says it cannot wait for a letter of comfort from a regulator on its finances. "We have an alternative financing framework and have been seeking to supplement this with additional capital for the company since last year," said a Peugeot spokeswoman. "The company wants to generate additional value for its shareholders but needs the right financial framework to do so." The company says it will "address the needs of its shareholders by seeking to raise capital in the coming months". Peugeot has made a net loss of €138.8m (£128.1m) in 2015 and in April this year the company made a net loss of €81.2m (£74.4m). The carmaker is growing its customer base and making progress on localisation as it prepares for its European debut in 2018. The company has doubled sales this year to 2.3m vehicles, although sales in France are down 4% and in Spain sales are down 27%. The company is also selling more vehicles

CD Greetings! We're Necromunda: Underhive Wars today with the World of Flesh Fourth - Original Soundtrack CD. Opened for some great exposure under Creative Source, and the chart spike above is something that we're sure to keep up for quite a while. In fact, to avoid delay, it's with this release that we are beginning to open the line of download options for the products. If you're interested in grabbing some of our products, click the banner or hit the options box, and thank you for your support! One thing if you're not caught up with the updates happening with the whole line, we've been doing several updates based on solicits which mean that what appears on the main page here is going to be somewhat out of date. A lot of this has to do with the delay on the Blood Bowl product to start and I will try to catch up as I can and keep you up to speed. I'm not going to bombard you with copious amounts of product, but where we do have new products unveiled, that's where you're gonna find them. So don't forget, if you dig what we're doing with most of the Scion stuff, you can check out the blog for further updates here. World of Flesh Fourth - Original Soundtrack 1. Q: restrict vs parse - java I am currently working on an application which captures the mouse movement and essentially draws a shape around it over time. Unfortunately this is being asked to be backwards compatible with java 1.4 and an answer I received which included 'restrict' to 'parse' is causing me difficulty getting the output I need. Not sure if I have worded myself correctly here but what I have got so far is import java.awt.geom.Rectangle2D; import java.util.ArrayList; import java.util.HashMap; import javax.swing.JFrame; import javax.swing.JPanel; public class RectTest extends JPanel { public void paintComponent(Graphics g) { g.drawRect(getBounds().x,getBounds().y,getBounds().width,getBounds().height); } } I have to use this class in order to display a rectangular shape which fits within the bounds of the JFrame. However what I would like to do is restrict this class to use with only a few pixels around the mouse as well as output the location so I can draw a box around the mouse. public class RectTest extends JPanel { public void getRect() { while(some event captured) { // some sort of function to get the coordinates of the mouse // then for each pixel that has been captured
