The best side of Gene Krupa is here, and, in "Kenny's Blues", his face is amazingly expressive. But the album really is so strong in that Krupa dominates it. "There's a Beat in the Road", includes a superb Gershwin solo, but, in case anyone thinks this was the original recording, it has been released in the same vein many times before. The pianist of this recording, in fact, is the next level up from that of Krupa's. But, although Krupa is the star, he did have some good players. (CK) The only jazz instrument to feature heavily on a record album, the tenor saxophone ranks with the lyric soprano saxophone, the clarinet, the violin and the flute. The latter two instruments were recognised for their wide melodic and harmonic range and their capacity for a percussive accent. Jackson may have been the most important of the tenor saxophone players for he continues to influence every new generation. He recorded only a handful of albums, but the little that he did, recorded at the most vital and creative of the jazz clubs in Greenwich Village made him into a legend. His most remarkable work came in live engagement and we have the evidence in the music preserved here. In a sense, what Coltrane does on this record is make a solid acoustic jazz record with the same kind of scope and experimental quality as Mingus. This isn't Mingus in the jazz idiom, but it is as close as you can get without singing and Mingus certainly had no interest in singing. By contrast, Coltrane's blues solos are very much in the American style, the instrument at its highest level, but with Coltrane's wide-ranging emotive playing, he was able to find the ever-widening moods and emotional responses that were embedded in most of the simple blues tunes. Most famous were the pieces called Race You To The Top and Tain-Taan. A great resource in the US for learning this kind of recording. Just before Coltrane's passing in 1967, I played it all the time and in 1967, when I finally met him, I played it to him. He listened very carefully and without speaking said: Thank you very much. And that's it.

the two songs from the capitol period you may recognize are a pair from the 1953 album songs for young lovers. the first, nothing but the best, debuted that year, and was produced by nelson riddle. the second song, the way you look tonight, was also produced by riddle and was released as a single later that year. as if all that weren't enough to make this album legendary, sinatra's relationship with capitol records also proved to be fruitful for elvis presley as well. it was during the early 1950s that sinatra made his leap from the small time cabaret circuit to the big time, while elvis was still on the microphone at sun records. presley was a regular visitor to sinatra's home, and the two became friends, often dining together and exchanging talents. elvis would occasionally perform a few songs for sinatra's daughter nancy, and would often record a few songs for the (then) newly-formed rca victor in the 1950s. elvis's career was all but over by the time this album came out, though, and he was never again working with sinatra. the two would continue to keep in touch, however. the mother of elvis's daughter lisa marie took sinatra's daughter nancy on a trip to europe in the early '60s, and elvis happened to be in germany at the time. they were able to meet up, and in a rare moment of privacy elvis asked sinatra to be godfather to his daughter lisa marie, who was born in 1960. sinatra accepted, and subsequently added his name to the birth certificate of both lisa marie and elvis's other child, jesse garon, who was born in 1961. 5ec8ef588b
