The first option is Standard Service at no cost to you. Simply call or text the toll-free number that is printed on your Product and record your service request information, and wait for a Canon USA technician to contact you. The second option is a Fixed Service Option for the covered Product. In the event service is required during the limited warranty period, you must contact the fixed Service option number that is located on your Product's serial number label or on your Product's product packaging. The service should be considered as a prepaid value-added service for your only cost associated with this remote management. It is not meant to be a monthly fee subscription to a service of this nature. If you are considering subscribing to the service, please contact us for more information. IP1500 Service tool enables you to read and write to the CAN (Controller Area Network) Bus. The CAN standard is a high-speed serial computer bus used primarily in automobiles. The CAN bus, a CANopen (Controlling Applications Network) compliant network, provides both hierarchical and non-hierarchical network communication among microcontrollers. CANopen is a global standard for reliable and real-time network communications and information exchange between vehicles, and other systems. For more information on CAN, visit www.can.com. This website is intended for reference purposes only.
