Thanks, Nate. I have noticed in my new LR5 almost all the features of the previous versions have been replaced with the newly added ones. The hue correction is much better, the "Rotate" tool is smoother and they even seem to have added a few more view options! I do enjoy the new vertical alignment and the halo of the new pre-select tool. I do think they've made a big mistake not making Lr5 avail in the CAC. They have made several other improvements and changes to dodge and burn and noise which are great! The overall workflow is probably not perfect, as they just have not found any way to clear all fields or selections when appending them yet. However, at least the crop tool is already more reliable and has the option to choose any new border. It was previously impossible to use whitespace alignment on a new background image. 2.46 - Stest No cropping option at the moment This is something that should have been done in the fourth-quarter. Hopefully, they will do it very soon. I hope it will be done some time in December. I also hope the opening up of the crop commands will be in time for Christmas. The photo editor has even improved with new tools, the addition of new fonts and the ability to apply the same tags again without resaving the file. I enjoyed the learning mode, as well, the idea of having the changes reversed or a list of the changed files is a great concept. I am still thinking we need to add a "floodfill" option for the contents tool. Adobe Lightroom 5.2 introduced a lot of new features and functions, but the results of upgrading the program were not as good as expected. For one, version 5 of this photo editing software felt slower. This was a small disappointment considering that a new version was at hand.- Nate
